

Dr. David Chvartzaid

Title

Prosthodontic Education around the Commonwealth: Canada

Abstract:

The aim of this session will be to present an overview of graduate teaching of prosthodontics in Australia/New Zealand, Canada and England. Dental faculties in these various jurisdictions have different administrative and financial arrangements shared between the university and third parties such as the public health system. In some jurisdictions, their remit can be dichotomous - to provide teaching of the dental profession and to contribute to dental treatment for the lower socio-economic section of the population. Availability of appropriate patients and resources can be problematic and this impacts on candidate requirements and skill development. Another challenge in any graduate program is selection of the “right” candidates. Unfortunately, financial considerations become paramount, both for the faculty and the individual. Further, specialist registration/licensure or certification is different in the various jurisdictions and there is varying control by the body representing the specialty. This can also result in conflicts associated with applicants trained in international jurisdictions.

Learning Objectives

1. Discuss the administrative program challenges arising from a combined government and university partnered institution
2. Overview entrance requirements to grad training and the challenges of assessing applicants from a diversity of international educational backgrounds
3. Review undergraduate and graduate Prosthodontic requirements and discuss the challenge of ensuring adequate testing of gained competencies and scientific knowledge
4. Discuss the challenge of licensure for internationally trained Prosthodontic specialists

Biography

David Chvartzaid completed hospital residencies in New York City and then undertook sequential specialty training in Prosthodontics and Periodontics at the University of Toronto. David is an Assistant Professor at the University of Toronto and is on staff at Mount Sinai Hospital. He is a Graduate Program Director in Prosthodontics at the University of Toronto, a specialty examiner for the Royal College of Dentists of Canada, and a Reviewer for the International Journal of Oral and Maxillofacial Implants.